A red flag fluttering opposite the door of an old farmhouse draws a crowd. Even the victims of former auction sales cannot stay away, though they know from experience that he who enters leaves his wits behind. A public sale at s prerevolutionary house into which had drifted a Mayflower chest and a bed upon which Washington had sleps attracted the attention of Dr. Abbott, who tells in "Recent Rambles" how he ventured inside and what was the result of his temerity. While willow pattern china was being sold he discovered a curious piece of polished, crooked mahogany lying between soup tureens and gravyboats. On picking it up and scanning it closely his first thought was. What a curious paper

The wooden wonder was brought to light again. "It's an old fashioned wooden butter knife," said she, "I've seen 'em afore this. Don't you know, in old times, it wasn't everybody as had silver, and manogany knives for butter was put on the table for big folks. We folks each used our own knife."

"What is it?" asked a still older lady. "A colonial butter knife," replied the doctor with an air of antiquarian lore.

"A butter knife! No such thing," answered this lady. "My grandfather had one just like this, and it's a pruning knife. He wouldn't use a steel knife 'cause it poisoned the sap."

The auctioneer at last took it in his hand, looked at it with a puzzled expres-

It started at a dime, and the doctor se-cured it for 25 cents. He took it home, rubbed the gummy surface with kero-sene, polished it with flannel, rubbed it with warm water and a toothbrush and then gave it a long, dry polishing. Then he showed his beautiful prize to his fam-fly with a triumphant "See there?" "Why, papa," cried the youngest daughter, "it's the back of a hairbrush."

It Was Fate.

The weary wayfarer had stopped the pedestrian and told him his tale of won, and it was really a pitcous tale. He had nothing to eat since the previous morning and was nearly familiated.

The pedestrian's heart was touched, and he tendered the weary wayfarer a disse, but the latter heatsafed. "Couldn't you give me comething cire?" he asked faintly.
"Too small?" asked the pedestrian "No, sir; not at all," replied the weary wayfure. "Int couldn't you
